Militias clash in Beirut

5 die as Israeli planes raid southern Lebanon

BEIRUT, Nov. 7 (AP) — Israeli warplanes blasted Palestinian commando strongholds in southern Lebanon today, a day after commandos fired Soviet-made Katyusha rockets into northern Israel. Provincial authorities reported five were killed and dozens wounded.

The Palestine Liberation Organisation said Israeli jets took part in the 45-minute bombing raid on eight Palestinian targets, including intensive anti-aircraft batteries. The PLO communique said no hits.

Among the major targets was a Russian-built Beaufort Castle at six kilometres from the border that has long been the major commando rocket-launching base in southern Lebanon.

The PLO communique forecast more Israeli strikes in the south and said commando losses in today's two bombing sorties were "minor."

The governor's office in Sidon, the provincial capital of southern Lebanon, said most of the casualties were Lebanese.

Israel said all its planes returned safely to base after the air raids.

The raids apparently were in retaliation for yesterday evening's rocket attack against the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona. Local press reports today said Israeli border gunners opened artillery fire on Amoun, in southern Lebanon, immediately after the rockets hit Kiryat Shmona.

A United Nations spokesman in southern Lebanon said U.S.-made Phantom and Skyhawk fighter-bombers were used in the raid, along with Israeli-made Kfir fighters.

The Israeli military command said that targets hit were bases belonging to the Arab Liberation Front at Barhiya and Beit Dajin on the Litani River, and a base of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine north of the Litani.

The Palestinian news agency Wafa said the city of Tyre on the Mediterranean coast was also hit. The sound of explosions from the bombing attacks could be heard in Sidon, 35 kilometres north of Tyre, authorities said.

It was the first bombing raid launched against Palestinian targets since Israeli planes struck near Beirut on Oct. 22.

Meanwhile, in Beirut itself, fresh fighting erupted today in the western sector after heavy overnight clashes between rival leftist paramilitary groups in which at least six people died, security sources said.

Intermittent rocket and machine gun fire echoed across the city at dusk after a day of tension on the Muslim west side of the capital, where most streets were deserted and many shops closed.

King meets Tariq Aziz

AMMAN, Nov. 7 (Agencies) — His Majesty King Hussein today granted an audience to Mr. Tariq Aziz, Iraqi deputy prime minister and a member of his country's Revolutionary Command Council.

The two discussed the current Arab situation and recent developments in the region. Prime Minister Madad Badran and Foreign Minister Muwaffaq Al-Tuwaim were among those present for the discussion. Mr. Aziz flew to Amman from Paris.

In war news today, Iraqi forces killed 60 Iranian soldiers and wounded an unspecified number in fighting last night and early today, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

It quoted a high command communique as saying the Iraqis also seized large quantities of light and medium weapons, as well as destroying two guns, a tank and two armoured personnel carriers.

The Iraqis lost 21 dead and two armoured vehicles, the communique said.

Meanwhile, the Turkish press agency, which has denied a news agency report published in the London-based Al-Hawath magazine that the United States recently sent a large quantity of aid material, possible including weapons and ammunition, to Iran through Turkey.

In a statement of the Jordan Times, the Turkish Ambassador, Mr. Mehmet Arslan, said: "Turkey has been following with sorrow and concern the clashes between her friends and neighbours, Iran and Iraq. Turkey has adopted as a policy principle to remain completely neutral and to refrain from any acts or attitudes that might lead to the prolongation and aggravation of the conflict. She hopes to see ended as quickly as possible."

Blames Tehran's 'arrogance' Iran threatens all of us, King says in interview

AMMAN, Nov. 7 (Petra/JNA) — His Majesty King Hussein has declared that Jordan's stand in supporting fraternal Iraq is in complete harmony with the principles and doctrines which the Arab people have fought for since the beginning of this century.

In an interview with the London-based Arabic language magazine Al-Hawath, published today, His Majesty said Jordan believes the danger which threatens part of the Arab homeland threatens all of it.

His Majesty added: "History is clear as far as Arab rights, including Iraq's rights, are concerned, whether as regards the territory or the Shatt-Al-Arab waterway. The same applies to the challenge when we have been facing as an Arab Nation as a result of Iran's actions for a very long period." The present conflict was caused by Iranian arrogance and an inclination towards domination and failure to observe the principles of Islamic brotherhood and good neighbourliness the King said.

His Majesty said Iraq's victory will be a victory for Arabs everywhere, and also a victory over despair and a victory against the inability to cope with the challenges and dangers facing the Arab Nation.

Recalling Iraq's pan-Arab stance, His Majesty said: "How can we forget that Iraq has always stood at our side? Can we forget the Iraqi Martyrs' Graveyard in Jenin? Can we forget that Iraq has always stood on the side of its brothers without hesitation under every circumstance? We are indebted to Iraq."

His Majesty affirmed that Jordan's position on the longest line of confrontation with Israel makes Jordan more sensitive and more understanding of the significance of cooperation and unity to face

U.S. near hostage reply

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (R) — The United States is about to decide how to respond to Iran's conditions for the release of the American hostages, the State Department said today.

"We're at the point of decision-making for giving the release of all 52 hostages," department spokesman John Tranter said.

Iran's four conditions were formally conveyed to the United States last Monday.

They sought a U.S. pledge not to interfere in Iran's affairs, the release of an estimated $8 billion in Iranian assets frozen by the Carter administration after the hostages were seized on Nov. 4, 1979, the abandonment of financial claims against Iran, and the return of the late Shah's wealth.

U.S. officials said earlier this week that all but the first condition presented legal and political problems for the United States.

The spokesman said there had been no direct dialogue between the United States and Iran over the terms for the release of the hostages. But indirect contacts between the two governments have been conducted through Algeria, whose ambassador in Washington, Mr. Redha Malek, had meetings at the State Department with Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher every day this week. Aides of President-elect Ronald Reagan were being kept informed of the situation, he added.

Mr. Reagan told Iran yesterday not to expect any advantage in waiting for him to take office on Jan. 20 before resolving the hostage issue.

Reagan hopes for meeting with King

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7 (R) — President-elect Ronald Reagan's transition team today pushed ahead with picking his cabinet and preparing a budget for Congress almost immediately when he takes office on Jan. 20.

Reagan campaign chief of staff Edwin Meese, one of the leaders of the transition team, told reporters the first budget proposals were being put together for submission to Congress.

Mr. Reagan also has said he would like an early meeting with His Majesty King Hussein to discuss problems in the Middle East.

Mr. Reagan yesterday told his first press conference since his landslide victory over President Carter that he would act as soon as possible on a 10 per cent income tax cut he promised for next year to stimulate investment.

He also said he would go ahead with a freeze on federal government hiring.

His advisers worked on the proposals, the government released figures which served as a reminder of the economic problems facing Mr. Reagan.

The Labour Department said wholesale prices rose last month by 0.5 per cent after declining in September, and the jobless rate for October edged up to 7.6 per cent.

Mr. Reagan yesterday invited the current Congress to go ahead and pass its own $39 billion tax cut during the final session scheduled to start next week, rather than wait for the new Congress to convene next year.

But President Carter's White House chief of staff, Mr. Jack Watson, made clear in a television interview that the outgoing administration would not support passage of the tax bill, which some economists have attacked as inflationary, in the forthcoming session.

Mr. Reagan announced yesterday that his campaign manager, Mr. William Casey, and Mrs. Anne Armstrong, former U.S. ambassador to Britain, would head the overall transition team to lay plans for his presidency.

In addition to former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, former NATO European commander Gen. Alexander Haig, Texas Senator John Tower and other prominent Republicans, he named three prominent Democrats to the leadership of his "interim foreign policy board."

They were Senator Henry Jackson of Washington state, a hardliner on U.S.-Soviet relations, former Florida Senator Richard Stone, a pro-Israeli politician, and millionaire Washington lawyer Edward Bennett Williams, a liberal adviser to many Democratic presidents.

Reagan's triumph a 'cold shower' for Tehran, Iraqis say

BEIRUT, Nov. 7 (AP) — The newspaper of the ruling Arab Socialist Baath Party in Iraq today said that Mr. Ronald Reagan's victory in the American elections was "a cold shower on Tehran's enthusiasm to conclude a reconciliation with Washington to resolve the U.S. hostage crisis."

Excerpts of the editorial in Al-Thawra were carried by the official Iraqi News Agency.

"Reagan's election suspended the hostage issue once again for several weeks or even months — that is to say, until the new president shifts to take power in the White House on Jan. 20," Al-Thawra said.

It added the American elections have suspended the hostage issue once again and the remaining 10 weeks of Mr. Jimmy Carter's presidency will not give him, at least from the point of view of decency, the authority to conclude the hostage crisis and sign a reconciliation with Iran.

The newspaper said: "Carter did succeed in pulling the legs of the rulers in Qom and Tehran by detaching his own terms for the immediate release of all hostages at once and to treat Tehran's conditions according to U.S. laws."

Al-Thawra said it believed the developments of the hostage crisis were nothing but a game to busy the Iranian people.

"The time has come (for Tehran) to announce the U.S.A. as a friend, ally and protector of Iran from its current crisis, created by (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini and his clique," the newspaper said.

Al-Thawra predicted Mr. Reagan would be tougher than President Carter on the hostage issue.

"Reagan seems to be planning to humiliate Tehran's rulers even more than Carter until the last chapter of the hostage play is written by Washington, and not Tehran," it said.

Jordan hopes that the defeat of President Carter will mean a new look by Washington at the Middle East question and the scrapping of the Camp David peace accords between Israel and Egypt. Information Minister Adnan Abu Odeh was quoted yesterday as saying:

"We consider the election result as a collapse of one of the pillars of Camp David, President Carter, with whom also fell a number of those who drafted the accords."

He was also reported as hoping that Mr. Reagan would show balanced feelings of justice and reappraise the Palestinian issue.

Mr. Reagan's criticism of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) showed it was time to step up Arab action against U.S. policy in the Middle East, a PLO spokesman said today.

Mr. Majed Abu Sharar, head of unified information at the PLO, told Reuters that Mr. Reagan's comments branding the PLO as a terrorist organisation "reflects the reality of American policy which rejects recognition of Palestinian rights under the leadership of the PLO."

The president-elect's comments shattered any illusions in the Arab World that Mr. Reagan would change U.S. policy in the Middle East, he said.

"I think the time is now ripe to step up the struggle against U.S. policy and throw all illusions about the likelihood of a change in U.S. policy towards the Arabs to the wind," Abu Sharar said.

The state-controlled Libyan news agency said Mr. Reagan "will have to live up to the expectations of the American people to avoid the destiny of his predecessor."

In its comment on the Reagan victory, the agency said: "The American people's choice of a new president is not merely a question of choice as much as it is an indication of the American people's desire that this president reassess previous American policies and resort to building bridges of true friendship and cooperation with nations free of tyranny and terrorism."

"All we need to do now is to remind the new American leader of the Arab stand which is shared by all Arab nations."

The world according to Reagan: No to SALT II, yes to Israel

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (AP) — The election of Mr. Ronald Reagan as U.S. president appears to signal the demise of the SALT II arms limitation agreement, which President Jimmy Carter had considered one of his major foreign policy achievements.

Theory, the administration seeks ratification by a lame Senate. But officials have acknowledged that this option has been politically unrealistic if Mr. Carter had been elected. In any case, Mr. Carter after his defeat that he would try such a move.

Reagan campaigned vigorously against SALT II, calling it "flawed" because, he said, it did not offer the promise of genuine arms control.

SALT II is not strategic arms limitation, Mr. Reagan said. "It is strategic arms buildup, with Soviet adding 3,000 nuclear warheads to their inventory," he recommended that U.S. and Soviet negotiators return to the negotiating table and "come up with a treaty which fairly and evenly reduces the number of weapons."

Reagan's criticism extended to other areas of the administration's handling of Soviet relations. At one point he accused the administration of "practicing appeasement — a belief that if we can contain (the Russians) we are people, they will smile at us," he called the administration's policy, "or the lack of it," invited the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. Criticising the administration's partial grain embargo against the Soviets as singling out U.S. farmers for sacrifice, Mr. Reagan suggested a full trade ban by the United States and the establishment of a U.S. military presence in Pakistan. These steps, he said, would clearly signal U.S. determination to deter Soviet aggression.

He has assailed Mr. Carter for cancelling the B-1 supersonic bomber, and for delaying the MX missile, the Trident submarine, the Cruise missile, the neutron warhead and for cutting the U.S. shipbuilding programme in half.

He can be expected to re-institute all or most of these defence programmes as part of the American military buildup.

Mr. Reagan has pledged to maintain U.S. support of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation. "The NATO alliance will certainly be tested in the near future as the Soviet Union tries to drive a wedge between us and our partners," the Republican candidate has said.

He is expected to reaffirm a "special relationship" with West

Germany and Great Britain. Under the Carter presidency, German-American relations were sometimes uncertain, due in part to a personality clash between Mr. Carter and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. There was also repeated German criticism of what German leaders called a lack of consistency in American foreign and defence policy under Mr. Carter.

Here are highlights of Mr. Reagan's views on other foreign policy issues:

IRAN — Mr. Reagan said it is a

"humiliation and a disgrace" that Mr. Carter has been unable to win the release of the 52 American hostages after one year. He declined, however, to say specifically what he would have done differently, although early in the campaign he suggested a naval blockade as a means of placing additional economic pressure on Iran. He has pledged to abide by the terms of any agreement President Carter reaches to secure the release of the hostages.

CHINA — Initially, Mr. Reagan

opposes the establishment of a Palestinian state and says the Palestine Liberation Organisation is "purely terrorist." A possible solution to the problem of the Palestinians could be their "assimilation in Jordan, designated by the United Nations as the Arab Palestinian state."

Mr. Reagan has indicated he would increase the U.S. military presence in the Gulf area and has noted that Oman is "a highly suitable and strategic location."

SOUTHERN AFRICA — Mr. Reagan supports continued investment by American corporations in South Africa as long as employees of these firms are treated equally. He was a consistent opponent of economic sanctions against Rhodesia, claiming the United States needed Rhodesian chrome. The sanctions were lifted earlier this year when Rhodesia became the independent nation of Zimbabwe.

CUBA — Shortly after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, Mr. Reagan suggested the United States consider as a retaliatory "option" a blockade of Cuba, Moscow's principal Western Hemisphere ally.

CENTRAL AMERICA — Mr. Reagan opposes a $75 million Carter administration aid package to Nicaragua, claiming this reinforces a government unsympathetic to the United States. Although Mr. Reagan opposed the Panama Canal treaties, he says he will fulfil terms of the treaties because they involve solemn U.S. commitments.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I: For decades, the issue of Arab rights has remained on the waiting list of each successive U.S. administration, on the pretext that these administrations needed time for fact-finding while Israel continued its aggressive practices. Needless to say, the reason for this neglect is the absence of a unified Arab strategy. This should not still be the case when President-elect Reagan assumes office.

The Arabs should take the initiative with regard to their cause, and participate positively in the shaping of events. They should not just wait for others to act. The Arabs should not accept further delay of progress on their cause.

Undoubtedly, the upcoming Arab summit in Amman will be the strongest proof that the Arabs insist on acting on the matter in line with a unified Arab strategy, which is now being prepared for approval by the Arab leaders at the Amman summit.

The Amman summit will lay the basis for Arab action based on a unified strategy, and will open the path upon which the Arabs will proceed, without waiting for others to act on their behalf.

President-elect Reagan having expressed in his first statement his appreciation of the significance of Jordan's role, we are duty-bound to recall that this role is completely in harmony with the Arab line charted at the Baghdad summit and reaffirmed at the Tunis summit, and which will be reaffirmed at the Amman summit. Jordan's role is a role of commitment to Arab national goals. The new U.S. administration will do well if it understands all this and realises that the Camp David process is dead, and that the Arabs will stand united for the sake of a just peace.

AL DUSTOUR: The landslide victory of Mr. Reagan and the Republicans is supposed to be a golden opportunity for the new U.S. administration to view Middle East problems and relations with the Arab World from a new perspective, completely free of the traditional pressures Israel has exerted on the White House.

Mr. Reagan comes to power with an overwhelming popular mandate, in the building of which the American Jews played only a minor role. Therefore, he is not beholden to Zionism, and does not have to repay a debt to it at the expense of American interests. This perhaps explains the Israeli officials' concern over Mr. Reagan's victory, including Prime Minister Begin's insistence on meeting with the president-elect during his visit to the United States. Mr. Begin hopes to wrest from Mr. Reagan pro-Israeli statements to commit him and to restrict his freedom of action once he enters the White House.

Mr. Reagan will be dealing with a Congress in which the majority is Republican. Therefore, his voice will be heard there, particularly seeing that several pro-Zionist senators were defeated in the elections. Consequently, the new president will be free of the Zionist pressure and restrictions imposed on the actions of his predecessors, which gives Mr. Reagan a golden opportunity to deal with the Arab World from an independent position, taking into consideration the interests of the United States alone; and consequently, to strengthen relations with the Arab World and build them on the basis of respect for Arab and Palestinian legitimate rights.

Will Mr. Reagan adopt this policy? Will he take advantage of his landslide victory and rectify the former mistakes of U.S. policy in the Middle East? This is what we hope. Nevertheless, because we have been so greatly disappointed in the past, we must simply wait and see.

Mother Teresa visits Jordan

Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, Nov. 7 — Mother Teresa, the 70-year-old founder of the Missionaries of Charity and recipient of the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, visited Jordan for two days this week.

While here, Mother Teresa was received by His Majesty King Hussein and Her Majesty Queen Noor at Al Nadwa Palace. During the meeting, the King praised her efforts and dedication in the service of mankind. He also awarded her the Jordan Independence Award, first degree, in appreciation of her humanitarian efforts.

Mother Teresa was in Amman to visit the Dar Al Salam home for the care of the poor and retarded in Shmeisani, established by the Missionaries of Charity in 1970. It is one of 182 such homes run by the order around the world.

On Wednesday night, Mother Teresa addressed the World Affairs Council in Amman.

In an interview with the Jordan Times, Mother Teresa said that her aim and mission in life was to express God's love and compassion to the poor and underprivileged.

"No one is doomed," she said. "We doom others or label them as doomed people, not God. With our love and care, these people will improve. The first rule of our society is to work for people regardless of colour, caste or creed. We work for the poorest of the poor, people who have nothing, have no-one and are wanted by no-one."

Mother Teresa said ordinary people can contribute towards the aim of the society "by sharing." She added: "Love begins at home. The family must stay together and pray together, and if they love one another, they will be able to give that love to others, to share it with others. Therefore, ordinary people can contribute by loving, by sharing, not from abundance, but 'until it hurts'."

Asked about the Missionaries of Charity's work in the Arab World, Mother Teresa said that besides the home in Amman established in 1970, there were homes in the occupied Gaza Strip, in Beirut and in three places in Yemen (Sana'a, Taiz and Hodeidah). A home would soon be opened in Egypt. The rest of the 182 homes worldwide are found in North and South America, Asia and Africa. There are 1,800 sisters and 400 brothers from 35 nationalities working in Mother Teresa's order.

Mother Teresa said these projects are financed by individual contributions. "We do not depend on fixed donations, we depend on Divine Providence. We give freely what we freely receive," she said. Asked if her receiving the Nobel Peace Prize had created

Rabbi Kahane starts hunger strike in jail

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, Nov. 7 (R) — Imprisoned militant nationalist Rabbi Meir Kahane yesterday started a hunger strike to push for a revision of his sentence for disturbing the peace in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Jordan.

Rabbi Kahane's lawyer, Rahamim Cohen, told reporters his client was protesting against the Israeli military occupation authorities' refusal to revise his nine-month sentence.

The rabbi, who leads a small group of extremists favouring the emigration of Arabs from the West Bank, has already served two months.

"The authorities refuse to meet with us to discuss a reduced sentence despite Rabbi Kahane's good behaviour in jail," Mr. Cohen told reporters.

A military spokesman said the rabbi's appeal was under consideration.

His Majesty King Hussein and Her Majesty Queen Noor meet Thursday with the founder of the Missionaries of Charity and the winner of the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, Mother Teresa.

worldwide awareness of her work, and therefore increased contributions, she said: "I accepted the Nobel Prize in the name of the poor. The money is not for me. Contribution did not increase, but concern and awareness of the poor increased throughout the world, and this is wonderful."

Mother Teresa said it was "difficult to get workers to do this kind of work for money, but we do not depend on paid workers, but on voluntary workers."

In conclusion, she told us: "Give your hands to serve the poor and your hearts to love them. Come to the 'Home of Peace' and see the poor and the loved ones."

Special to the Jordan Times

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jordan Times Damascus correspondent Pat McDonnell recently paid a visit to India, where she scouted the many things that country has to offer visitors from the Middle East and here. Here is her exclusive report on the unique shopping opportunities to be had in India.

DAMASCUS—Since the days of Christopher Columbus, Europeans have been seeking the riches of India. Now, as long as men expatriates in Jordan and are half-way to the sub-continent, they might as well take advantage of its proximity and their holidays in India.

Indian stamp marks 5th century of the Hijra

EDITOR'S NOTE: Saturday is Muharram 1, 1401 A.H. (the first day of the 15th century after the Hijra). The Indian government has issued a commemorative stamp, officially released by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, to mark the occasion. Here is a report on Mrs. Gandhi's remarks.

DELHI, Nov. 7 (JT)—Releasing a stamp commemorating the 5th century of the Hijra, the beginning of the 15th century of the Islamic era, Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi said that India celebrates this occasion with "gratefulness" of the rich and varied contribution that Islam has made. "Paying my felicitations to people all over the world, she commended that "this very great religion has had profound impact on India. It is a matter of pride for us in India that apart from great religions which were born in India, Islam for us is an Indian religion," Mrs. Gandhi said.

A full text of Mrs. Gandhi's speech follows: "I feel privileged to release this stamp issued by India to commemorate the completion of 5th century of the Hijra, the Islamic calendar, and beginning of the 15th century of Islamic era. It is an occasion of high significance not only to the millions of Muslims in our land but to people all over the world, as it marks a milestone in the annals of a very great religion which has had profound impact on mankind."

The teaching of the Prophet Mohammad had an instant and lasting appeal because of its democratic feeling and its message of equality and brotherhood, of self-help and peace. Human history has few parallels to the rapid advance which Islam made in its early years.

In India celebrate this anniversary with grateful awareness of the rich and varied contributions that Islam has made to the evolution of composite civilisation. It is a matter of pride for us that apart from the great religions that were born here, Islam for us is an Indian religion."

A wholly erroneous division of history, made popular by writers of the last few decades, some of our people tend to equate the advent of Islam with the coming of Muslim rulers. In reality the message of Islam permeated parts of our subcontinent long before Muslim rulers ruled our country, just as Christianity came to us centuries before the arrival of European missionaries.

Whatever kingdoms arose under Muslim dynasties were Indian kingdoms and empires, and a part of the rich and diverse fabric of Indian life and culture. Indeed the influence of the Islamic saints and scholars had much more to do with the spread of their faith in India than the political power of the rulers.

Men like Nizamuddin Auliya, Khwaja Moinuddin Chisti and Baba Farid had profound influence on leaders of thought in their days as well as on the common people. The manner in which Guru Nanak was born and brought this home to us.

The contributions of Islam in the fields of mathematics, astronomy, medicine, architecture, literature, music and handicrafts are well known. It is in the fitness of things therefore that we mark this fourteenth hundredth anniversary of the Hijra of the Prophet from Mecca to Medina, from which beginnings this great faith spread to different parts of the world. I take this opportunity to convey my felicitations to people all over the world who are marking this occasion.

A stamp that I have released should be regarded as a symbol and a mark of the kinship and goodwill that exists among the people of the world. It should serve as an inspiration to us to fight against those who sow dissensions in the large family that is India. There will be many more functions in India during the year to mark the event. The National Museum is arranging a special exhibition on the Islamic heritage in India, and an international seminar on this heritage is being organised.

The initial Mecca of shoppers in India is Bombay, where a thousand boutiques will tickle the fancy of any foreigner. Take, for instance, Burlington's, located in the Old Taj Hotel, a marvellous renovated hotel built in 1904 overlooking the famous bay.

A dress shopper can take a picture of any gown she wishes sewn to her proportions to Burlington's, and 24 hours later, it is completed for a cost of $100 and up. Scores of pattern books lay on the shelves in rooms where tailor-made creations are fashioned to size. The upstairs ready-to-wear section contains kaftans of Indian silk and djellabas embroidered with pearls and sequins priced from $64 to $120. Jumpsuits, harem trousers with tunic tops, ready-made saris with stitched-in pleats and zipper are also available, along with men's shirts and suits of Indian silk.

A short drive away is the Golden Thimble on K. Dubash Marg. Here, one imagines Columbus fainting away at the semi-precious gems and hand-embroidered work fashioned by Mme. Ursula Varma, the German-born proprietress whose boutique is famous among a select number of jet-setters.

The pencil-slim Mme. Varma seats patrons on Indian cushions, and produces exquisitely embroidered cloth samples from hand-woven baskets. Upon being asked, she said that upstairs, she has a workroom filled with master Indian embroiderers who can produce a requested design within 24 hours -- before one's ship leaves port.

"Indian or Arab customers request very conservative gowns with yards of intricate (and expensive) embroidery, whereas Western customers ask for less ornate, but more revealing lines," Mme. Varma said.

Since Westerners have not as yet discovered her shop en masse, Mme. Varma's customers are mostly Indians, who request saris ranging from about $100 with hand-embroidered borders. Copies of Vogue magazine designs generally cost $23 without lining, and $32 with.

Next stop on the shoppers' odyssey is Jaipur, the pink sandstone capital of Rajasthan, founded in 1727 by Sawai Jai Singh, a prince, soldier and astronomer.

Clearly, the most romantic and impressive hotel to stay in -- for an American -- is the Rambhau Palace, the hunting lodge of the most recent rajah of Jaipur, which was constructed in the 1920s. Peacocks strut across exquisitely manicured lawns on the grounds of the royal residence, which became a hotel in 1957. Each of the 87 guest rooms in the palace is unique. All have high ceilings, marble floor and fireplaces.

Before shopping, it's best to view some of the landmarks established by the Rajput rulers in the 12th to 18th centuries. One hour away by auto is the Amber Palace, a rare piece of Rajput architecture built on the Hindu pattern. One rides an elephant for 50 rupees ($6) up the winding road to this ancient structure, where ear-splitting rites are performed by Brahmin priests in the Shila Devi Temple near the palace. This shrine is the personal temple of the present maharajah's wife, and before leaving the country on a trip, the maharajah and his family always pay homage there.

Food is excellent at the Rambhau Palace, where Indian musicians play during meals. But another favourite dining spot of tourists is Niro, which serves Chinese, Indian and continental cuisine.

Although gems are Jaipur's biggest export item, there is much else to buy in this remarkable old city: enamelled brass, ivory and silver bracelets, wood and ivory carvings, block-printed and tie-dye fabrics and antique wood blocks.

More than 40,000 gem-cutters are employed in the cottage industries in Jaipur, but it seems as if the greatest board of exquisite gems is to be found in the shop of H.C. Rakyan on Mirza Ismail Road.

The proprietor explains that nine precious stones are cut in Jaipur: ruby, emerald, sapphire, diamond, cinnamon ruby, coral, pearl, cat's eye and yellow sapphire. Semi-precious stones include aquamarine, peridot, amethyst, garnet, tourmaline, zircon, opal, onyx and black jade.

"The prices of these gems are half what they cost anywhere else in the world," Mr. Rakyan declared. "Jaipur is where jewels are imported to be cut, and our men have been cutting them here for five centuries. Rajput princes wanted gems cut specially for them, and they traditionally gave shelter to artisans. Jaipur is the world's supply house for gems."

When asked the preferences of his foreign customers, Mr. Rakyan answered: "Americans buy emeralds, rubies, star sapphires, cat's eyes and aquamarines. Europeans prefer the aquamarine and garnet. Arab customers choose the ruby, emerald and star sapphire."

At this point, he pulled a box from his safe and showed the Jordan Times a star ruby from Burma weighing 7.31 carats, for which he had been offered $30,000 a carat. He also displayed an engraved topaz paper weight as big as a human fist, and exquisite Rajput miniatures painted on ivory.

When it comes to handicrafts, the northern state of Kashmir offers the world's best buys in furs, handloomed rugs surpassing Persian carpets with 550 knots a square inch, and exquisite examples of papier mache work ranging from napkin holders and bracelets to vases and bookcases.

Economic News Briefs

Gold prices fall back to strong dollar

LONDON, Nov. 7 (R) — Gold slumped below $600 to its lowest level for five months today and share prices fell round the world as investors switched their funds into dollars, attracted by high interest rates. The dollar, which began to climb following Mr. Ronald Reagan's presidential election victory went up even further today. Gold, boosted by Mr. Reagan's victory to $657 an ounce on Tuesday, fell at the London morning fixing to $603.32, $54.75 lower than its close here yesterday, as investors put their money in the dollar. It later dropped further to $597.

They said "hot money," which traditionally moves around the world looking for the best return, was pouring into the dollar and strengthening it against other major currencies.

U.S. banks raise prime rate to 15.5%

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (R) — Leading U.S. banks raised their prime lending rates by a full point to 15.5 per cent yesterday reflecting growing inflationary pressures in the economy. With the election out of the way, the banks led by Chase Manhattan and Continental Illinois Bank and Trust moved decisively and increased the prime rate from 14.5 to 15.5 per cent in one leap. Other banks were expected to follow suit because intensifying pressures in money markets make it more expensive for them to borrow money.

Prime interest rates have risen by two percentage points in the past month and further increases are expected before the end of the year, analysts said. The Federal Reserve Board (Fed), the nation's central bank, is also expected to raise its discount rate, possibly by one or two points from the present 11 per cent.

President-elect Ronald Reagan is also likely to favour high rates to compensate for the extra demand to be unleashed by tax cuts next year.

After the prime rate announcements, the Dow Jones industrial average, fell about five points. Prices were broadly lower in heavy trading following sharp increases touched off by Mr. Reagan's election victory.

U.S. wholesale prices, jobless rate rise

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (R) — Wholesale prices and unemployment both increased in the United States last month, underlining the problems of inflation and recession that face the incoming administration of Mr. Ronald Reagan.

The Labour Department said today that wholesale prices rose by 0.8 per cent in October after a drop of 0.2 per cent the previous month, which was the first decline in more than four years and had raised hopes that inflation was beginning to ease.

It said the jobless rate was slightly higher at 7.6 per cent compared with 7.5 per cent in September.

The department said rising car and food costs were responsible for reversing the downward trend in prices reported for September.

It said car prices rose 3.4 per cent in October, accounting for almost half the overall jumps in producer or wholesale prices. Food prices increased 0.5 per cent.

Government and private economists have said they expect prices at both the producer and the consumer level to keep rising at a double-digit pace for the rest of this year and into next year.

The department said the slight increase in the jobless rate was due to rising unemployment among women and teenagers. The number of Americans without jobs in October stood at eight million, up from 7.8 million the previous month.

Saudis expected to sell Japan extra oil

TOKYO, Nov. 7 (R) — Saudi Arabia is expected to sell Japan an extra 4,000 barrels of crude oil a day from January under an agreement to encourage Japanese investment in its development projects, industry sources said yesterday.

The bonus oil, rising to about 20,000 barrels daily after five years under a 15-year agreement to be signed soon, will be for Japanese firms involved in building a $300 million methanol plant at Al Jubayl on the Gulf, the sources said. Eight Japanese companies have joined the Japan-Saudi Arabia methanol company, in which the Japanese government has a 30 per cent stake.

Portugal hopes to buy S. Arabian oil

LISBON, Nov. 7 (R) — Portugal hopes to obtain oil from Saudi Arabia to make up for some of the 70,000 barrels a day (b/d), 45 per cent of its requirement, that was lost from Iraq because of the Gulf war, according to a senior Portuguese oil official.

Mr. Pires Miranda, head of the state oil company Petrolgal, who acts for the government as a roving oil envoy, added in an interview with the Lisbon weekly Expresso that Portugal hoped to buy the Saudi oil under a government-to-government deal. The volume involved was not disclosed.

Portugal was not among the nine nations which are reported to be on a preliminary Saudi Arabian list of recipients for relief oil supplies, according to the New York oil industry newsletter, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly.

Mr. Pires Miranda said Portugal also hoped for extra oil from Abu Dhabi, Oman, Venezuela, Nigeria, the Soviet Union and Mexico.

African OPEC states discuss strategy today

LONDON, Nov. 7 (R) — Oil ministers of the four African OPEC producers have scheduled a meeting in Algiers tomorrow and Western oil company executives said one topic may be the outlook for a possible price increase.

Disclosing that the meeting between Algeria, Gabon, Libya and Nigeria would be held, the Algerian News Agency said discussion would focus on oil supplies to developing countries including African states. But it also said they would discuss latest developments in the international oil market.

Oil ministers of OPEC last met in Vienna in September when they agreed to freeze prices until the next regular pricing session of the 13-member group in Bali, Indonesia, on Dec. 15.

Since the Vienna session, when a glut prevailed in the world market, the Gulf war has robbed the world of Iraqi and Iranian oil totalling nearly four million barrels a day (b/d) or more than one-tenth of OPEC output.

One effect of the Gulf war has been to firm up free market prices for the premium crudes produced by the African countries whose oil ministers are to meet in Algiers.

Free market rates for African crudes are now in the $38 to $39 a barrel range. During the glut they slipped well below official contract rates of $37 for a 42 U.S. gallon barrel leading Western oil analysts to speculate that the African countries might be forced to trim prices at the OPEC Bali meeting.

Oil analysts said the producers are now doubtless trying to judge how the market will develop and noted that Libya and Algeria are among OPEC pricing militants. But Mr. Tony Mackintosh, partner and oil analyst with British brokers Wood Mackenzie, said he did not think that in the long term premium African crudes would be worth more than a five-dollar differential above the maker Saudi Arabian light crude.

Saudi light is at present priced at $30 a barrel although Mr. Mackintosh said he would not be surprised if Saudi Arabia raised it to $32 or $34 at the next OPEC pricing session.

The Saudis, the biggest producers, and Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar held a meeting of their oil ministers in October to discuss the effects of the Gulf war. One report they are making a one million bid of extra

The Algerian News report that the African are to meet in Algiers that, if they make any available, it will go to the countries.

Oil industry sources Nigeria has the capacity present output by at least b/d and that Libya is about 400,000 b/d.

LONDON STOCK MARK

LONDON, Nov. 7 (R) — Gold mining shares fell sharply, lowering the bullion price drop to below $600, dealers said. Heavyweight gold producers were as much as $10 lower. Western Holdings at 967.5 cents. Other heavies were up 1 cent, lower, dealers added. Elsewhere, equities were up by continued high U.K. interest rates though some prices were down from the day's lows after news that a strike at B.L. Ltd. had called off. At 1500 the FT index was down 4.6 at 4742.

U.S. and Canadian shares were lower.

Government bonds were up to 1/2 point easier with a rise over the continued rise in U.S. interest rates a major factor, dealers said.

White, Atkins to play in snooker final

LAUNCESTON, Tasmania, Nov. 7 (R) — A dazzling display of precision potting by English snooker star Jimmy White tonight earned him a place in the final of the 1980 World Amateur Snooker championship.

Warning to an enthusiastic crowd, the 18-year-old White displayed all his skill to eliminate the world amateur billiards champion Paul Mifsud of Malta, who had aspirations of becoming the first man to hold both the billiards and snooker world titles.

Starting the second session at 3-3, both players exhibited skill in placements around the table with the scores leveling again at 6-6 after Mifsud had led 6-4.

White levelled the scores with a fantastic frame in which he cleared the table with a break of 100 leaving Mifsud scoreless and went on to prove the selection committee's evaluation of him as number one seed by taking the final three frames in only 25 minutes.

White meets Australian Ron Atkins in the final match over 21 frames tomorrow and Sunday.

Ron Atkins became the first Australian to win a place in the final for 12 years when he beat Indian champion Arvind Savur by eight frames to six here yesterday. It was Atkins' second win over the Indian in a world championship match. He defeated him in a Round Robin group at the tournament in Malta two years ago.

After building a 4-1 lead in the semifinal Atkins, 41, allowed Savur back into the match by making a number of elementary mistakes. But he recovered to take the final frame with an outstanding break of 46.

UEFA Cup third round competitors drawn

ZURICH, Nov. 7 (R) — Eintracht Frankfurt, West German holders of the European Football Union (UEFA) Cup, were paired with Sochaux of France when the draw for the third round was made here today.

Ipswich, sole British survivor, face the Poles of Widzew Lodz, conquerors of the crack Italians, Juventus — on penalties — in Turin on Wednesday.

A second Franco-German duel pitted Hamburg against St. Etienne, who beat the Scots of St. Mirren by goals from Jean-Francois Larios in each half on Wednesday.

Hamburg had a tougher time to reach today's draw, needing a second half goal from blond striker Horst Hrubesch to keep them ahead of the Dutch club PSV Eindhoven for a 3-2 aggregate.

West Germany, who dominated the competition last time, have four clubs in the last 16 but any hope of monopolising the semifinals, as they did early this year, vanished today when Stuttgart were paired with their compatriots, Cologne.

Belgium, like France, has a double chance through Lokoren and Standard Liege. Lokoren's narrow win over Dundee United — the goal they scored in Scotland earning them an away-goal survival — suggests that Spain's Real San Sebastian, with striker Satrustegui in form, may prove too much for them.

Standard Liege, who caused the only West German casualty in Europe so far this season when they dumped Kaiserslautern in the second round, are rewarded with a tie against the tough East Germans of Dynamo Dresden.

Dresden also went into the draw thanks to an away goal after playing a goalless draw with the Dutch club Twente Enschede on Wednesday.

Torino, the sole Italian survivors, can expect a tough battle with the Grasshoppers of Zurich.

The Swiss won a place in the draw by a dramatic win over Porto of Portugal. Starting 2-0 down, they rubbed out one goal in each half and completed their task in the final minute of extra time — from the penalty spot.

Torino meanwhile were keeping their defeat in East Germany down to a single goal, beating Magdeburg on the strength of a 3-1 win in Italy.

Radnicki, who beat Bulgarian opposition in the last round, must improve their prospects against Alkmaar, unbeaten pacemakers in the Dutch league who made short work of Bulgarian challengers this week.

Alkmaar claimed their third round berth 24 hours ahead of all rivals, beating Levski Spartak Sofia 5-0 on Tuesday for a 6-1 aggregate.

Hiroshima bids to host 1990 Asian Games

HIROSHIMA, Nov. 7 (R) — The western Japanese city of Hiroshima today decided to bid for designation as the site of the 11th Asian Games in 1990, city officials said.

The city's readiness to host the games will be conveyed to the Asian Games Federation, who meet in New Delhi early next month to decide the site of the 10th Asian Games scheduled for 1986.

U.S.S.R. celebrates its 63rd anniversary

MOSCOW, Nov. 7 (Agencies) — Rockets, tanks and troops paraded across a snowy Red Square today in the annual military show commemorating the October Revolution. But at least 17 western and Asian envoys passed up the display in a new protest against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Defence Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, dressed in his uniform of a Marshal of the Soviet Union, blasted the United States and the "aggressive NATO bloc" from the top of the Lenin Mausoleum and said that the "Soviet armed forces have everything necessary to give a crushing rebuff to any aggression."

Soviet defences must be strengthened, Mr. Ustinov said, "to undermine the efforts of imperialism to obtain military supremacy," the defence minister, however, made no direct reference to U.S. President-elect Ronald Reagan, who has called for reestablishing American military superiority over the Soviet Union.

Marshal Ustinov said the Soviet Union was "consistently waging a struggle to ensure the peace and security of the people, for the preservation and deepening of détente and for curbing the arms race."

This course, he said, was opposed "by forces of oppression, militarism and aggression, the activities of American imperialism and the aggressive NATO bloc."

"They are seeking to cast mankind into a new cold war and build up war preparations," he said. "Yet a further step... was the adoption by the U.S. of a so-called new nuclear strategy."

This tense situation, he said, had been further complicated by a rapprochement between Peking and the U.S. and other imperialist states.

The highlight of the parade marking the 63rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, as in past years, was the display of about 220 tanks, artillery pieces, armoured personnel carriers and mounted missiles.

The massive weapons churned across the vast cobblestoned square in a cloud of blue diesel exhaust.

Western military observers said the only new piece of heavy equipment in the parade was a new armoured personnel carrier. The most impressive were four big Scud-B surface-to-surface guided missiles.

The diplomats who stayed away from the parade included all ambassadors from the nine-member European Economic Community, all members of the King sends message

AMMAN, Nov. 7 (Petra/JNA) — His Majesty King Hussein has sent a cable to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev congratulating him, in his own name and on behalf of the Jordanian people and government, on the anniversary of the October Revolution.

His Majesty expressed the hope that the relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries will be strengthened for the interest of the two friendly peoples and the Arab cause.

His Majesty also wished further progress and prosperity for the Soviet people.

North Atlantic alliance except Norway and Turkey, and China and Japan. Envoys from Australia and New Zealand also stayed away.

Later, however, most of the western ambassadors presented themselves at a Kremlin reception hosted by Mr. Brezhnev. An American diplomat said the reception was considered a "ceremonial event," distinct from a military parade. At the reception, Mr. Brezhnev said the Soviet Union would "invariably be true to the peaceful course of its foreign policy and it will resolutely come out against the arms race and military adventures and for mutually beneficial cooperation of all countries."

by 1990, seem extremely conservative. The study said the use of micro-processors and micro-computers would have greatest effect on clerical work in offices and labour intensive services. Industry would be relatively less affected, but job losses would be substantial even there.

"We may be facing a transition towards a society that no longer needs to make full-time use of its entire labour force," the study added.

The ILO said current annual sales of micro-electronic products were estimated at $120,000 million in western Europe, Japan and the United States, and between $10,000 and $15,000 million in the rest of the world.

It expected global demand to top $200,000 million by the end of next year.

Most new microchip business would go to the U.S., the study said, but Japan was catching up fast and the nine countries of the European Common Market (EEC) had invested more than $2,200 million in micro-electronic technology.

Britain was leading the field in western Europe, the ILO said, with $800 million committed to manufacturing facilities, applications and education.

lower-court acquittal of four men charged with the bombing of a Cuban commercial plane that killed 73 persons four years ago.

Security troops surrounded the aircraft while it was parked on the runway at Curacao's Willemstad airport, the Venezuelan authorities said.

They said the three hijackers had threatened to set off a bomb aboard the plane, unless they were eventually taken to Cuba.

The pilot, Capt. Rafael Lares Bianchi, in the only radio contact with Curacao's international airport tower, said the hijackers had forced him to change route under the bomb threat.

The plane landed at the Havana airport at 11 a.m. and the three hijackers surrendered to the Cuban authorities.

The 54 other passengers and the five crew members were safe, the officials said.

In Caracas, the official Venezuelan news agency reported later that the plane had left Havana for home with its passengers and crew.

Soares rejects pleas to enter Portuguese presidential race

LISBON, Nov. 7 (R) — Portugal's presidential election today virtually turned into a straight fight between two army generals after socialist leader Mario Soares refused pleas from party militants to enter the race.

Head of State Gen. Antonio Ramalho Eanes and his right-wing challenger, Gen. Antonio Soares Carneiro, both submitted their nomination papers to the supreme court yesterday for the Dec. 7 election.

Mr. Soares withdrew his personal backing from the Socialist Party's official candidate, Gen. Eanes, two weeks ago, but last night he finally turned down demands from sympathisers in the party that he stand for the presidency himself.

President Eanes today gave up his post as chief of staff of the armed forces to throw his full weight into his campaign for re-election.

It is the first time in six years that direct control of the armed forces has not been in the hands of the head of state.

President Eanes renounced the post last night to prevent politics splitting the military after he officially launched his re-election bid.

His main rival is another general, fiercely anti-communist Gen. Antonio Soares Carneiro, who is being sponsored by the ruling right-wing Democratic Alliance.

In the race for the Dec. 7 election, Gen. Eanes is emerging as the main candidate of the left and the man dedicated to maintaining the regime set up after the 1974 revolution.

He came to power in 1976 on a mainly right-wing ticket but the present government is bitterly opposed to him. It is determined not to let the president use his position to gain votes between now and election day.

Informal sources said the government does not plan a solemn opening of parliament so as to prevent Gen. Eanes from making a political speech to a nationwide audience. The new parliament is due to convene on Nov. 13.

Zambian security situation back under control after foiled coup attempt LUSAKA, Nov. 7 (R) — President Kenneth Kaunda today reported Zambia's security situation under control following the thwarting of plans for a right-wing coup three weeks ago.

The president, in a speech to his United National Independence Party (UNIP), said people detained pending investigation of the plot had nothing to fear if they were innocent.

Security precautions remain tight and the president gave no indication how much longer the dusk-to-dawn curfew imposed on most urban areas on Oct. 23 would last.

A number of prominent Zambian businessmen and former senior government officials have been detained or have had their passports confiscated since then.

"Security measures in Zambia are now firmly under control," Dr. Kaunda said today. He stressed that a strong UNIP, Zambia's only legal political movement since he banned opposition parties in 1972, was the key to the country's salvation.

"Those who have been arrested have no need to fear if they are innocent," he said. "We follow the rule of law in Zambia." The president and his party seem in a much stronger position since he announced the coup plot on Oct. 27.

Yet underlying problems in the country's copper-dominated economy persist with low world demand for the metal.

15 injured in Munich anti-militarism demo

MUNICH, Nov. 7 (AP) — Demonstrators, some wearing spiked helmets and uniforms of the old Prussian army fought with police on Thursday night during an army swearing-in ceremony in one of the city's main squares.

Authorities said 15 persons were arrested and 15 demonstrators and police were treated after breathing tear-gas or being injured in the fight.

It was the second violent outbreak of anti-militarism in two days in the Bavarian capital. Someone threw firebombs through the window of a recruiting office on Wednesday, starting a fire that caused about $10,000 in damages, according to official estimates.

Authorities said about 1,000 riot police had sealed off the Königsplatz for the ceremony, the first in a series marking the 25th anniversary of the Bundeswehr, the modern armed forces.

The demonstrators, most of them youths, attempted to break through police lines to where Bavarian State Premier Franz-Josef Strauss was addressing about 2,000 recruits, authorities said.

Some protesters shouted "Nazis pigs" and carried signs demanding "end the arms race." The exact number of the demonstrators was not known, but an estimated 3,000 persons had gathered earlier in the Marienplatz, several blocks away, to protest the ceremony in a demonstration that was banned at short notice.

SEOUL, Nov. 7 (R) — President Chun Doo-hwan today appointed a nine-member committee to vet South Korea's politicians under a new law.

Time running out for Madrid talk

MADRID, Nov. 7 (Agencies) — The United States today accused the Soviet bloc of raising doubts whether it really wanted next week's European Review Conference.

U.S. delegation spokesman John Treacy added new tension to the deadlocked preparatory negotiations for the security conference in a statement attacking the latest east bloc proposals for an agenda.

The talks are deadlocked over the question of how much time to devote to discussion of human rights.

Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin, however, strongly defended the latest east bloc agenda plan, tabled late yesterday by Warsaw Pact members Hungary, Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

He told reporters during a break in negotiations that the eastern proposals respect the interests of all 35 participating states. These are the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and all the European states except Stalinist Albania.

But western delegation sources dismissed the Soviet-sponsored plan as completely unacceptable because it did not allow enough time for discussion of human rights and Afghanistan, no provision for a detente meeting after the eastern bloc would guarantee the of all phases of the conference, due to open day.

These include a whether the 1975 detente agreement is oured by the parties and study of new proposals for European armament meetings, a detente process further.

Kania warns Solidarity leader against trying to push too far

WARSAW, Nov. 7 (R) — Poland's communist leader Stanislaw Kania warned against strikes in a speech published yesterday which was aimed at the Solidarity union leaders who have threatened a stoppage next week.

The party first secretary told steel workers last night that abuse of strikes by Solidarity as a weapon in negotiations was difficult to accept.

Solidarity plans widespread strike action starting next Wednesday if the supreme court fails to provide a satisfactory ruling on the union's statutes.

The appeal to the supreme court against a political clause written into the statutes of Solidarity by a lower court is due to be heard on Monday.

Mr. Kania told party activists in Krakow yesterday that he had full sympathy for the new Solidarity union, which grew into a mass labour movement following the summer strike wave.

He acknowledged that the confidence of the ruling Communist Party had been considerably undermined and that its restoration was progressing slowly.

A new direction for Pakistan's regime? Ke

ISLAMABAD, Nov. 7 — Pakistanis in recent weeks sense a change approach by the military regime. Some say that President Gen. Zia ul Haq is increasingly acting like a civilian politician to broaden his popular support.

Gen. Zia, planning to expand his cabinet soon, has even reached out to some former supporters of the late prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, whom he toppled in 1977.

Despite the shift, few see the armed forces loosening their grip on this South Asian country of 75 million at any time in the near future. Gen. Zia openly refers to the military as his "constituency."

The 56-year-old army chief of staff promised elections immediately after seizing power. Polls were twice postponed before he finally cancelled them a year ago along with banning political parties and imposing press censorship. "Under the prevailing circumstances, the holding of elections would amount to national suicide," Gen. Zia said in a recent speech in Karachi.

Pakistanis observers say that his new approach is modelled, consciously or not, after Mr. Bhutto — the man his regime removed and executed.

Mass gatherings and airport welcoming ceremonies in the past two weeks have reminded many Pakistanis of the Bhutto style of mobilising the bureaucracy and providing buses to bring in cheering crowds.

Gen. Zia's speeches to these rallies have included some of Mr. Bhutto's themes: that western-style democracy was unsuitable for Islamic Pakistan and that foreign powers are backing his political opponents.

Recently in Lahore, Gen. Zia acknowledged there has been criticism of these lavish e but he denied that such displays were a political party.

Happy ending for passengers of hijacked Venezuelan airliner

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 7 (Agencies) — A DC-9 Venezuelan Avenza jetliner with 37 passengers and 5 crewmen aboard was hijacked by three men yesterday morning during a domestic flight, a spokesman for the airline said.

The spokesman said the plane landed in Curacao, in the Dutch Antilles, for a refuelling stop before proceeding to Cuba.

The hijackers commandeered the plane shortly after it took off at 7 a.m. from Caracas airport for a 45-minute flight to Puerto Ordaz, in eastern Venezuela. The DC-9 landed shortly after in Willemstad, Curacao, Venezuela and Cuba have a long-standing agreement which calls for the return of hijacked planes and the trial of hijackers.

The hijacking came in the midst of a diplomatic dispute between Cuba and Venezuela.

Last month, Cuban President Fidel Castro threatened to break relations with Venezuela if the Venezuelan military supreme court upholds a lower-court acquittal of four men charged with the bombing of a Cuban commercial plane that killed 73 persons four years ago.

Security troops surrounded the aircraft while it was parked on the runway at Curacao's Willemstad airport, the Venezuelan authorities said.

They said the three hijackers had threatened to set off a bomb aboard the plane, unless they were eventually taken to Cuba.

The pilot, Capt. Rafael Lares Bianchi, in the only radio contact with Caracas international airport tower, said the hijackers had forced him to change route under the bomb threat.
